Influences of my Midwestern roots and studies at the University of Cincinnati, DAAP fine arts program are clearly a legacy found in many of my paintings. However, upon moving to Dallas in 1998, my work experienced a decided shift in color pallet and theme. Additionally, travel throughout my life, following that ever-fascinating "road less traveled" in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Central America, and Europe has provided experiences and access to many of history's greatest works of art. My artistic efforts are a part of my experiences in these travels and are an attempt to represent natural elements graphically depicted in high color contrast and rich lighting effects. Contemporary floral images to abstract landscapes and representational images with a contemporary approach are all embodied in my offerings as a fine artist and student of nature.

I am currently relocating my home and my studio to Dripping Springs, Texas.
