I'm a naturalist artist living in the Texas Hill Country. My current series, Stained-Glass Trees, is inspired by the windows of my childhood church. I'd spend Sunday mornings lost in those leaded color bits and images; as an adult, I get lost in the same way among Autumn leaves and winter trees.

But while painting my trees can be a meditative process, I don't see art as a solo sport. Through social technology and studio visits, I'm connected with viewers at almost every stage of my creative process, and energy from human interaction directly 'colors' my work.
